Lori Traweek, Energy Services Board Director

Engaged in the energy industry for over 38 years and most recently retired as the American Gas Association (AGA) Chief Operating Officer, Lori Traweek is a respected industry leader and spokesperson with an extensive understanding of the energy business and experience in organizational management and operations. She has been devoted to enhancing safety, security and the environment, working with the Department of Transportation (DOT) on groundbreaking pipeline safety regulations, helping to develop reasonable and effective approaches to cyber and physical security, and initiating a voluntary Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) program to reduce methane emissions. Ms. Traweek has been integrally involved helping companies achieve operational excellence in the safe, environmentally responsible, reliable and affordable delivery of natural gas.

“Navigating Uncertainty: The Future of the Gas Industry”

Caught between the desire for safe, reliable, affordable, environmentally sustainable energy and a growing mantra to move away from fossil fuels, the gas industry is grappling with a myriad of policies and regulations that are in various stages of formation and implementation. Despite the challenges, recent surveys reveal a continuing preference for gas among the general population. In addition, a “made in the USA” manufacturing boom is anticipated, underlining the need for reliable and affordable energy. With this landscape as a backdrop, Lori will explore how the industry is trying to meet the current and future energy and environmentally sustainable needs of the nation and how companies who support the industry can make the most of it.

Keynote Presentations

The keynote presentations at this year's DCA convention are thoughtfully connected, building on each other day after day. Scott Stratten's opening address emphasizes the importance of the human connection in a world increasingly dominated by technology. He highlights the significance of staying in touch with our customers, employees, and loved ones in order to maintain that vital human aspect. Artificial Intelligence (AI) may be ubiquitous, but it can also be mystifying. Robbie Sawyer and Sam Stanton will break down the barriers to entry on Thursday in a fun and hands-on presentation and show attendees how to make the most of these new technologies. Finally, Jim Carroll explores the ways in which AI and other megatrends are revolutionizing the business world. Attendees will come away with a comprehensive understanding of how to stay ahead of the curve in an ever-changing landscape. Altogether, these three presentations are a must-see for anyone looking to keep their finger on the pulse of the tech industry while prioritizing the human connection.
